The Man who Puns.

What the hawkeye knows about him.

The Burlington Hawkeye says:

"Alcestis" wants to know if it is very difficult to manufacture puns. Not a bit of it; the easiest thing in the world. For instance, you are challenged to make a pun on eau de cologne. You immediately create a hypothetical being, who for purposes of the necessary vernacular, shall be African as to his nativity, whom, you suppose, for reasons, has borrowed in the bleak and impecunious winter days a scuttle of coal of a wealthier neighbor, and which he is, unfortunately (for the man of whom he borrowed it), unable to repay, and hence, with the return of the ensuing winter, when the creditor insists upon the payment of the debt, is compelled to explain that circumstances over which he has no control still necessitates him to "owe de coal loan."

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF EXCELLENT ATTACHED, IN DUVAL'S ADDITION, ON THE WEST SIDE OF ST. JOHN BETWEEN FEDE-REAL AND COUTTS STREETS.—By virtue of a challenge of the subscriber by Joseph deed of trust executed to the subscriber by Joseph deed of tr the debt, is compelled to explain that cir-cumstances over which he has no control still necessitates him to "owe de coal loan." When you reach this point of your narra-tive you must look fixedly and shrewdly at FRIDAY AFTERNOON, 26th June, 1878, at same When you reach this point of your narrayour auditor (for by that time you will have but one left, if your associates are as sensible people, as we assume them to be), and say, with marked and changing emphasis, "See? See? Coal; coal loan; cc-logneowe de-owe de coal loan; eau de cologne; see? de cologue; de coal loan; coal loan owe de coal loan." There is no limit to the number of repetitions you are expected or required to make of the explanatory clause. Most punsters repeat it about one hundred and ninety-eight times. We have a friend, who is a gifted punster, and he dosen't often get through repeating the explanatory clauses until about the last of next week. His wit is greatly admired at quiet gatherings of literary people, although the records show that he has been clubbed off of Main street at different times by every businessman in Burlington.

You can shine most brightly at little evening parties by punning on the names of the people present. A few evenings ago we heard a very brilliant thing by a young gentleman who is a light in society. He was introduced to a Miss Smith, and with a sudden inspiration of genius that even astonished his most intimate friends, be affected a lisp and said: "Oh, this is a Mith Smith; is Mith Smith; see is Mith Smith; 's Mith Smith." He began safes. We knew a young man, a graduate of an Ann Arbor millinery establishment, who would walk about the streets for days, until he found a gang of men hoisting a would stand around that spot so long as the work went on, and stop every man who went by, or rather tried to get by, and say to him: "This is safe, but it isn't very safe. They'll get it in safe, you know? Safe! safe; see? Safe? safe. It's safe; safe, you know. See? safe. It's safe; safe, you safe to stand under it. See? It isn't safe safe into a second-story office, and then he safe to stand under it. See? It isn't safe, you know, and it is safe. See?" One time a large safe, weighing fourteen thou-sand pounds, which was being hoisted into a six-story window, broke the tackling and fell to the ground, missing this young man by only about sixteen feet. A number of Christian men, who witnessed the accident and this young man's escape, immediately went off and joined the Ingersoll atheists saying they could not believe in a providence that would miss such a splendid opportunity as that. Strange to say, this young man's parents love him, and it is rumored that his mother is proud of him, and even urges him to inflict himself upon mankind.

M. Labouchere's London Truth has more funny stories in it than all the rest of the English papers put together. Here is the last: "The records of Romsey Abbey show that the curates in the livings of St. Leonard and St. Lawrence received their tithes in kind, receiving every tenth cow, calf, and pig. A rather pompous, tight-laced clergymen was one day called upon to christen a child, but on asking its name the woman who brought it said, 'I don't know, sir; it's your child, sir!' 'My child?' exclaimed he. 'Yes, sir; its the tenth child, sir.'" "Got-any cow-bells?" "Yes; step this way." "Those are too small. Haven't you any larger?" "No, sir. The large ones are all sold." Rusticus started off, and got as far as the door, when the clerk called after him, "Look here, stranger, take one of these small bells for your cow, and you won't have half the trouble in finding her, for when you hear the bell you will always know she can't be far off." The farmer bought the bell.

Among the Zulus, a nation of the Caffres, according to etiquette, the mother-in-law cannot face the son-in-law, but must hide, or pretend to hide, when she sees him. In this country the custom is reversed. It is the son-in-law who does the dodging .- Cincinnati Breakfast Table.
